What is NKOS

❖ Devoted to discussion of functional and data models for enabling knowledge organization systems/services (KOS)—such as classification systems, thesauri, and ontologies—as networked interactive services to support the description and retrieval of diverse information resources.[1]

❖ "Knowledge Organization Systems/Services (KOS) model the underlying semantic structure of a domain. Embodied as Web-based services, they can facilitate resource discovery and retrieval. They act as semantic road maps and make possible a common orientation by indexers and future users (whether human or machine)."[2]

❖ Each presentation has a 25-minute slot – 20 minutes for the presentation and 5 for questions.

❖ At the end of each session there is an additional Q&A period for discussion.

❖ The panel session (#2) has 45 minutes for presentations, plus 15 minutes for discussion. The panel was organized by Margie Hlava.

❖ There is one 15-minute break each morning as indicated on the schedule.

❖ With the permission of submitters, their written submissions and slides will be made available on the NKOS website and NKOS Europe github (https://nkos-eu.github.io/) after the workshop.
